

www.Hans-Ulrich-Imesch.ch

Willkommen

Nice to meet you on the Web. Maybe we already know each other, maybe not. I would like to sketch a kind of portrait of myself here. If you have any questions, please contact me: imesch@iggz.ch.

You may be my age, maybe older, but probably a lot younger. Maybe you are top-fit, maybe you are sick. Maybe your life is harmonious, you have everything you need in life or maybe you are standing on a precipice and wondering if you should jump. Perhaps you are completely happy, prosperous, satisfied with yourself and the world, hold a high-ranking position in the social fabric, you are someone, perhaps you are deeply unhappy, money is just not enough, you are at war with fate, you manage to get through somehow, feel like an alien in this world. Anyway, I like you! Because you question why you are here.

It is generally human to strive for success and wealth but what are success and wealth actually? In reference to the response from the sage Paramahansa Yogananda to this question, namely: Whoever has found God has found success, I say: Whoever who has found himself, has found success.

Questioning your own human condition is the first step on the road to success. Not everyone asks this question, and that is not a reproach. But those who do ask it reveal a potential that pushes towards fulfilment. And this fulfilment can become one's mission in life. Or in other words, the meaning of life can be seen in the fulfilment, in the realisation of this potential. Well, that is how I see it anyway.

The young man in Paulo Coelho's novel "The Alchemist" asks the old man, "So where is the treasure?" The old man says: "The treasure is in Egypt among the pyramids ... To get there you have to follow the omens. God has prepared a path for everyone to follow. You just have to read the omens that he left for you."

I think I can say that my Website documents such a walk to the treasure of the pyramids. What has been created externally is what could be called my life's work. Only it is the case that a recent external event (a project in the USA) is obviously another sign that the path has not yet come to an end. I note this with satisfaction, gratitude and composure.

I hope my Website also documents the fact that the search for oneself is not a process of selfish navel-gazing. Neither is it about art for art's sake. Whatever activity you are pursuing - perhaps you are devoting yourself to a family, perhaps you are an employee or are running a company, you might just manage a fortune, maybe you are retired and are into a hobby - it doesn't matter, your job links you to the collective and your personal progress on the way to yourself will manifest itself in your activities.

The knowledge that emerges on the road to oneself is a knowledge based on experience. It is not the intellect that creates the knowledge. Its important task, however, is to reflect the experiences. This Website can serve you as an analogy. It may also be that you want to go a bit of the way with me. I give a brief presentation of my modus operandi in the sub-menu Holistic Design and possible topics for part of the road together can be found under offer. I hope the Website inspires you, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Hans Ulrich Imesch, 23.04.2017

(60 years after April 23rd, 1957, the day when I began my apprenticeship as a structural draughtsman, in other words, the day when I began my search for the treasure among the pyramids)